aft gang aglee," but such was not the case on Tuesday evening, when the listst anniversary of the birth of Scotland's national bard, Robert Burns, was most fittingly observed by one of the largest gatherings of Scotchmen and admirers of Burns that Norwich has ever seen. The observance was held at the Wauregan house, with 171 in attendance, surpassing in numbers what the committee had planned for, although all found room and the best of service. Time and patience had not service. Time and patience had not been spared in preparing for the affair and it proved a decided success in every particular, so much so that the committee in charge can now see fu-ture similar duties staring them in the face.

The large dining room was well filled by the gathering of sons of bonny Scotland and their friends, the guests being seated at the head table with three other long ones extending down the room, while back of the head table a number of small ones were set to aca number of small ones were set to accommodate the extra attendance.

Burns was a liberal or a democrat and lived far in advance of his generation. His spirit of independence found expression in verse and he was oft reproved for expressing sympathy for the American cause. He was an honest man and writer in his successes and fallures. His work was simple and true and shipes with no luster and true and shines with no luster but his own. He was poor and often boastful that it was honest poverty. He possessed a tender nature, and here the speaker referred to many of the poems of Burns and gave quotations to show his nature and the quick application of his gift, speaking in continuous of The Month of the policy of the policy of the policy of the Month of the policy of the policy of the Month of the policy of

H. R. Barstow corroborated the testimeny of his wife. He heard Mrs. Main crying on several occasions, but heard only one affair.

W. R. Carpenter testified that the defendant had roomed with him and left there last November, after having been accused of having a woman in his room. Mrs. Carpenter also testified to Mr, Main's actions at the house. R. D. Harris told of Mr. Main being with a number of girls.

As the first witness for the defense, Main was called. He denied the charges of his wife and said that he did not abuse her. He may have been rough at times when they were fooling, but never intended to do harm and was not cruel. He denied case, and said that the conditions he described were not brought about by Mr. Main, as alleged.

Frank W. Main, father of the accused, testified that Mrs. Lucy Main had never complained that Maurice mistreated her. She had said while at his home that she did not intend to have children. Mrs. Henrietta Main told of visiting her son and daughter-in-law several times, but no mention of any trouble or of Maurice abusing his wife was ever made to her. Mr. Main said he was guardian for his son, who had about $1.600 in the bank.

At this point court was adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock. The case will be finished today.
